Tips on Setting Up and Using Your Success Tips

Setting Up Your Success Tips

If you would like to automate your marketing, you can set up your success tips to be automatically sent to your list on a regular basis by pre-loading them into your database management system. Most database management software systems have the capability of sending automated or timed emails so that you load them once, schedule their delivery and leave them alone. Examples of the more popular email management systems are AWeber (www.aweber.com), Constant Contact (www.constantcontact.com), iContact (www.icontact.com), and 1ShoppingCart (1shoppingcart.com), Infusionsoft (Infusionsoft.com) or Ontraport (Ontraport.com). You can research these to determine which solution is a best fit for your business needs.

For blog posts, you can simply preload your blogs and schedule in advances the days you want them to post.

As always, we recommend that you customize these success tips with your own stories, anecdotes and personal messages. But keep them short as that is what makes this tool so effective!

Using Your Success Tips

Staying in touch with your list in a meaningful way is the key to creating relationships, developing trust and familiarity, and ultimately converting your prospects into clients. Using a numerous tools and delivering them through a variety of mediums allows you to be creative in your marketing which is more attractive to your prospects and clients.

Success Tips are a fantastic tool to use because they are short, provide great value, and can be delivered in written, audio or video form.

We recommend using your Success Tips in conjunction with the Ready2Go product bundle (<http://www.Ready2GoMarketingSolutions.com>) as the products coordinate together.

Here's a few ways you can use your Ready2Go Tips:

- Blog posts
- A "Thought of the Week" or "Success Tip of the Week", that provides value, is easy to read, and is a meaningful touch.
- A short article in your newsletter
- Can be recorded and emailed in audio form, placed on your blog, on your website or sent in your newsletter.
- Can be developed into a short video training and be emailed to your list, placed on your blog, on your website, or sent in your newsletter.

Success Tips

The Boss of You

Throughout your life, many people have tried to shape your values and tell you what to believe, what to think, and what you should hold dear. Most, if not all of these people were well intentioned, each of them imparting lessons learned through experience, and speaking from their own unique perspective. These people were your parents, your teachers, your spiritual leaders and your friends. Every one of them wanted the best for you...as they saw fit.

Now you're an adult, and as you've probably figured out, nobody is the boss of you except for you. Even if you follow the requests (or orders) of someone you hold to be an authority, you're doing so because you choose to do so because you respect that authority.

With that understanding, it's important that you only do or say things that align with your chosen core values, whether those requests come from within, or someone else.

When you run across situations that may have you question whether you are living your values or someone else's, here are 3 quick ways to regain your autonomy, and ensure that you maintain a healthy degree of sovereignty...

1. Acknowledge Your Feelings

Check in and ask yourself if you are mad, sad, glad, scared, ashamed, or anything similar. If your dominant feelings are uplifting, you're moving in the right direction. If you're feeling consistently angry, sad, scared or ashamed, you're probably living out of integrity with your core values, and trying to please someone else.

2. Acknowledge Yourself

You're amazing. You're an extraordinary human being...and sometimes you forget that. When you forget, you seek validation from others, and probably give up your power in order to get it. Acknowledge the gold you see in yourself, and remind yourself what you love about you. Soon you'll feel more powerful and centered, so you can regain the reins on your life, and make choices that serve you best.

3. Communicate Your Boundaries

When your values are being compromised to the point of discomfort, unhappiness or resentment, it is time to set some boundaries. When doing so, communicate clearly, calmly, firmly, respectfully, and in as few words as possible. Do not justify, get angry, or apologize for the boundary you are setting. You are not responsible for the other person's reaction to the boundary you are setting. You are only responsible for communicating your boundary in a respectful manner.

You're a powerhouse. Let the world know, not by dominating others, but by honoring yourself.
